

Standard Process & MediHerb – Food Research International

List of Product Equivalents

No two products are identical if made by different manufacturers and some are more “equivalent” than others. Also, companies tend to use different ingredients (Standard Process Laboratories sometimes uses porcine glandulars, USP vitamins, claimed mineral salts, and/or colors, whereas none of these are in Food Research International products). It should be noted that Standard Process uses its trademarked term “Protomorphogen” (which it abbreviates PMG) for some items and Food Research International uses the terms Cytotrophin (the original term that Royal Lee received his patents with, but that Food Research International has permission to use) and Enzomorphogens (EMG), for some similar items.

As a general rule, products listed below as “vegetarian” can take longer to notice efficacy in some cases than those with glandulars.
